ALL MISSIONARIES ARE FINGERPRINTED AND VIRTUS CERTIFIED.
LINDSAY FAY is a romantic at heart, student of love, and seeker of the good life. She grew up with two siblings in Huntington Beach, CA. It was in college that a dream rose from the depths of her heart; to convey to women their God-given beauty, purpose, and worth and she hopes to spend her life inspiring women of all ages to walk in their true value. It was through women's ministry that she encountered the writings of Saint John Paul II, which colored her understanding and perception of the feminine genius. She looks forward to spending the year as a missionary with The Culture Project; where she hopes to witness to the joy filled life that is found in choosing virtue.

TOM COSTELLO grew up New Jersey and graduated from Franciscan University in May 2013 with a degree in Mathematics Education. During his time at Franciscan, he was active with baseball, mission work and nursing-home ministry. After a year of teaching and coaching, he joined The Culture Project to serve as a witness to the joy of authentic life and love. Inspired by his own educators to embrace his specific skills and attributes, he has a passion for encouraging other young people to strive for greatness using their unique gifts and talents. This year as the Los Angeles Team Leader, he is excited to participate in The Culture Project’s vision of restoring a society that respects the dignity of each human person throughout all stages of life.

HANNAH GUTIERREZ attended St. John’s University in Queens, NY to study journalism. After completing her sophomore year, she transferred to Ave Maria University to be better formed in mind and soul and in 2013, she graduated with a degree in Theology. She loves her loud Puerto Rican family that includes four beautiful sisters. She enjoys exploring new places through their food—especially desserts. Hannah will never turn down an opportunity to dance or shop. She is excited to be part of this mission of authentic love! She has big dreams of living in a world where all women see their beauty and goodness.

KAYLA STADLEMAN is originally from Pittsburgh, PA. Kayla loves being active, playing sports, spending time with people, and finding small coffee shops wherever she goes. She attended Saint Vincent College in Latrobe, PA where she graduated with a bachelor's degree in Psychology. During her time in college, God lit Kayla’s heart of fire for her Catholic faith. By graduation, she felt God calling her to take her love for service and evangelization by serving Him as a missionary. Kayla is now entering her third year as a missionary with The Culture Project. The past two years she served in various cities including Los Angeles, New York City, and Philadelphia.

KRISTA INGILLI is a Florida girl with an avid love for all things outdoors. She has been an athlete her entire life and loves to find parallels between her faith and sports. With her immense passion for the youth and, with a personal testimony, Krista finds her heart in advocating the message of living a life of virtue. She spends her time exploring the crunchy side of life, drinking copious amounts of coffee, and dancing to every song that she claims is her favorite (hint: every song is her favorite). When not powerlifting, she can often be found in her hammock along side her pet kitty Prim, reading the works of C.S. Lewis, whilst eating a chocolate chip cookie...or two.

GIAN GAMBOA moved to California at the age of 9 and spent most of his childhood playing soccer and wrestling with his brothers. During high school, his involvement in the youth group sparked a fire in his heart for Jesus. Graduating from California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo with a degree in Biology, Gian developed a passion for integrating his studies of the human body with John Paul II’s teachings on the Theology of the Body. A sports aficionado and music enthusiast, Gian is excited to spread the message of The Culture Project and invite the culture to the light of virtue and the beauty of authentic love.
